Singson gets 18 months, to quit House; family in tears

By Cynthia D. Balaña and Inquirer Northern Bureau

MANILA, PHILIPPINES—The door to a member of the Philippine House of Representatives was slammed shut on Wednesday.

Suspended immediately for 18 months in jail for being found for drug trafficking, Rep. Ronald Singson is preparing to resign his House seat, his father, Senator Rodolfo Singson ("Boss") Singson said today after a Hong Kong judge ruled pronounced the verdict.

Intervened by the husband for wife from Hong Kong, the elder Singson said he was would quit his post as House's third district representative.

"We had long thought of resigning," the politician said. "We are just studying the documents needed."

The elder Singson said he would personally talk with Speaker Mariano Marcos Jr. on his next return to the House of Representatives, in which he would make arrangements to be released.

Chinese ZTE execs willing to testify in court

By Kristian L. Rios

EXECUTIVES of the ZTE Corp., the Chinese telecom equipment firm involved in the controversial $122-million national broadband network (NBN) deal, are willing to testify in court about their dealings with government officials but not accept the death penalty, according to a deputy special prosecutor in Manila.

Erica Tardila, who is reportedly in contact with the Chinese officials, has secured for prosecutors that the two are willing to testify in the Sandiganbayan in the trial of former Information Planning Secretary Benjamin Noe in deal lights on the allegedly corrupt $122-million deal during the previous administration.

The two officials, identified as Ben Yang, the company's senior officer, and Li Yong, the vice president, were only "in contact" with Tardila, who was a former consultant for the project, Tardila said.

"They are afraid for their safety," he said.

"Sandigan and the prosecution could not find the two Chinese officials and had asked Tardila to contact them. 'We cannot find them,' he said.

Tardila, a former consultant of Noe, and Juan de Nazario Jr., a businessman who was himself involved in getting the contract for the broadband project, have secured former President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, the latter's husband, Jose Miguel Arroyo, and former education czar Benjamin Abalos, at all, allegedly receiving kickbacks from ZTE Corp.

The project was intended to build a broadband network linking government agencies and local government with nationwide.

The Commission has charged Noe with violation of the anti-graft law for allegedly conspiring with Tardila on the NBN project, and for allegedly meeting with ZTE officials when the project was under assessment.

Abalos is also facing similar graft charges. At a Senate hearing in September 2007, Noe testified that Abalos offered him $200 million to approve the deal, confirming reports that the contract for the NBN project was tainted with corruption.

Manila and state prosecutors would ask the Sandigan-bayan, which is investigating cases against Noe and Abalos, to issue subpoenas to the Chinese embassy in Manila for it to find and summon the ZTE officials to testify.

Should the ZTE executives refuse to come to the Philippines to testify, prosecutors could go to China to get the witnesses' depositions, he said.

According to Tardila, the Chinese officials could not accept the prosecution's claim that some government officials took kickbacks from the deal.

The two officials were cited as the ones who gave "substantial money" to Abalos. De Nazario, who met the ZTE officials in China with Abalos in 2006 to discuss the possibility of partnering with them, testified that Abalos had received commissions from the Chinese firm.

It is believed in the US District Court hearing in Manila that Abalos presented the ZTE executives for "consultation" in order to get a favorable response from the foreign government.

De Nazario said his lawyer had told him they already gave "substantial money" to Abalos.

Abalos, who resigned from his post in the wake of the scandal, admitted that he knew the ZTE officials but denied bestowing the deal or accepting money from the Chinese firm.

Euro aid misused, says envoy

Some of the European Union development aid money was misused in the past, according to the new EU ambassador.

EU Ambassador Guy Laubard, who assumed the post only last July 25, made the disclosure in his first ever press conference in Manila yesterday.

The ambassador clarified that the allegations "supposed in this past" but would not provide details.

Laubard, who has been with the EU for 21 years, said the 27 member countries had "very stringent controls and mechanisms."

'Recovery orders'

EU recovery and development aid projects are regularly checked by independent auditors, he said.

And when a EU money is not spent the way it should be spent, the agency issues what is called "recovery orders," he said.

He said the beneficiary to return the money and Laubard.

In a statement he issued after the press conference, Laubard clarified that "issuing a recovery order does not imply that the has been mismanagement of funds."

"This is simply the consequence of mismanagement of our complex financial rules, or in most cases, a request to not allocated funds," he explained.

He said EU projects and other financial aid are implemented by a set of specific rules and regulations.

"Being fully aware of the complexity and complexity of our rules and wanting to support an optimal implementation, we have started to provide financial and technical guidance to beneficiary facilities beneficiaries of EU funds and their rules," he said.

One of Laubard's priorities in Manila is the development of an EU Philippines dialogue on the framework of the work in the region through the Partnership Agreement.

The agreement will come into force only after ratification by the Philippine Congress and the European Parliament. "but we should start to develop our dialogue along the lines defined in the PTA," he said.

Last Monday Laubard, who is from Strasbourg, France, presented his credentials to President Aquino.

In November 2010, the EU announced that it would provide the Philippines with 10.1 billion in development assistance over the next three years to help the country move to high-income development levels.

The figure is 770 million total EU development aid to the Philippines in the year 2010.

Community driven antipoverty drive eyed

PRESIDENT Aquino has ordered the Cabinet to study the resolution submitted by students, people's groups and nongovernment organizations urging the national government to adopt the community-driven development strategy as a national program.

"The President said it is probable, he does not say any problem, but he wants the strategy to be decided first so it can be adopted as a national strategy," Soliman said after a forum on people-powered community development in Maitland.

"If the community is involved in the project, we involve them together in the maintenance and improvement of the road project because they were part of the decision making and in the implementation of the project," Njirahwa said. —Marianne Swedlow ought to be used for repatriation of OFWs.

Statistics show that there are 669,642 OFWs in the Middle East.

Almost 35,000 of them are in Libya, 35,000 in Bahrain, 1,417 in Yemen, and 440 in Egypt.

LEGAT CITY—At the Gov. Arroyo's request, Congress is to pass a P700-million emergency supplemental budget to be used in repatriating overseas Filipinos. Secretary of Labor Leila de Lima said the fund would be used solely for repatriation of OFWs.

He asked Congress to immediately act on passing the budget to ensure repatriation of about 20,000 OFWs in Libya, Egypt, Bahrain and Yemen. "Of the security needs, it is a matter most to address the problem and achieve a 'zero casualty' target for OFWs in the Middle East," he said.

He said the fund would authorize Philippine Airlines to repatriate and support the arrival of international plane next, or to bring OFWs back to the country and provide other support services needed for the mass return of Filipino workers abroad.

Galante said the Department of Labor and Employment has a P60-million available fund this year for OFW repatriation, which he said was not enough to ensure the repatriation process.

The government said during the Lehman crisis in 2008, an AECOP appropriation for helped pay P750 million in funding for the repatriation of over 13,000 OFWs working in Lebanon.

Aside from the supplemental budget, Galante proposed the creation of a National Solidarity

LEGAT CITY—About two passengers stranded for hours at the Bolo airport for several hours on Thursday after a Cebu Pacific plane was delayed due to technical problems.

Cebu Pacific Flight 5014, was 15 min late to leave Bolo at 1:15 p.m. but its schedule was reset to 1:30 p.m. Another delay moved the schedule to 5:04 p.m.

Resident Carmen, the official station head at the Bolo airport, said the delay was due to the Bolo-Cebu flight was delayed because the plane's engine light from Cebu to Cagayan de Oro was also delayed due to "additional servicing."

Michelle de Guzman, Cebu Pacific customer care representative, said in a phone interview that the plane's engine "minor" maintenance problems which required additional servicing from maintenance crew.

SCENES FROM A REVOLUTION

THE PICTURE THAT WENT AROUND THE WORLD At about 4:45 p.m., Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos, vice chief of staff, held a news conference at the former's office in Camp Aguinaldo to announce their breakaway from President Ferdinand Marcos. Only Radio Manila broadcast the news to the entire nation. (AP/WIDEWORLD)

HE'S THE MAN But Aquino was the first to see people over Radio Veritas to go to EDSA and protest the Marcos breakaway military. But Jaime Cardinal Sin (above) gave all the credit for the sudden stream of people who troop to EDSA to his human shield around Camp Crame. (AP/WIDEWORLD)

SLEEPING IT OFF Tired of sleepless nights, with supporters, local reporters and other strangers sleep every night was the first night of the EDSA revolt within the premises of the defense ministry. (AP/WIDEWORLD)

'First time in history a mob controlled by voice on the air'

(Editor's Note: The following is the transcript of an interview last week with Fr. James J. Rosier, 37, who is now in the Intensive Hospital in Washington City. The interview, conducted by Gloria H. of EDSA, was about the role of radio in the 1986 People Power Revolution.)

By Fr. James J. Rosier, S.J.

RADIO NOT ONLY made a difference, it was the whole thing. It was a first time in history that a mob was controlled by a voice on the air. Radio assembled the crowd, if you remember. From radio that's the way it all began.

Cardinal Sin went on the air to his own point. He was not in the center, but what he did, he made the phone and said, "you're on the air" and he spoke. His voice was heard everywhere and the people reacted to it at once. When he said "come out to EDSA," they came out.

Actually, we had 50 radio stations all over the country, so which one came in, in this case, [Manila], it gave us tremendous power. That radio was the power because when you spoke to everybody they believed in what you were saying. They did, indeed, you know, especially when what you were saying was what the people really wanted to hear, what they wanted to do. So, when you see radio was the powerful thing, it was a powerful one because of radio but because of the heart of the people.

When they see the tanks in the afternoon, the people started to change. Now you would wonder why. This is the only country on the face of the earth where you could stop a tank only with your hands. It is the only country where because of the heart of the Filipino.

Under those tanks were a dozen tanks, and if he wanted to, he could crush everybody else. But did he do it? Did he do it? No, he didn't. Because the Filipino saw about a billion Filipinos dead, in other words a billion Filipinos with a tank. It's the heart of the Filipino. It's how they thought.

Radio was so important that since that the country took out things. The country was a couple of thousands of soldiers to the mountains in Mindanao, Palawan. And they started it. They were trying to disfigure it. They attacked the transmission.

but we still had a monthly transmission, and we kept on going.

Only in the Philippines

People power will only work in the Philippines. I don't think it will work anywhere else. Why? Because of the heart of the Filipino. It was really the reason for success because those who were in power, they had guns, they could shoot and kill if they wanted to.

Two men persuaded a Filipino to shoot a fellow Filipino but they were standing on top of the tanks and the men in the tanks were Filipinos. In when they came, people stopped the tanks with their hands. How could that be? A person cannot stop a tank? They did it because of the heart of the Filipino. The Filipino thought, they will not surrender unless you Obiang give a promise, so deeply embedded in all the Filipinos that they don't think of it as a crime.

It never occurred my mind that Marcos would win. No, no, no, but never win. And Marcos was weak. When a Filipino gives, a Filipino gives with love. Marcos didn't have that. The only one Marcos really loved was himself. That was it! And people knew that. Therefore, he didn't have the power, because it was the heart of the people.

They were not impressed by the guns. They were not impressed by the tanks. They were not impressed by the position in government. What they wanted was what was right, what was true, and they stood up to it. There is no other country that does that. They stood up with their hands, that was not an accident.

Radio is the thing

The radio is the thing, but the heart of the people matters a lot. If what radio says, really touches the heart of the people and what they want and when they stand up as individuals, then radio is effective. That is the heart of a nation. It's not a word. Filipinos have a basic realization of the command of God. Like little children. Love one another as I have loved you and so that's the way they live.

The Philippines is loved by God. The Philippines is blessed by God. The love of the Filipino for each other is unique. Obiang who came here are absorbed by it, the Filipino heart is open.

'No witness vs Dominguez brothers'

DOJ asked to dismiss charge vs car theft suspects

By Mike Dixon and John M. Avello

BROTHERS Raymond and Roger Dominguez—the alleged leaders of a car theft syndicate—yesterday asked the Department of Justice (DOJ) to dismiss the complaint filed against them in connection with the death of car dealer Emerson Lozano.

"The lack of sufficient evidence, Roger and Raymond, asked the justice and leaving, most respectfully pray for the outright dismissal of the instant complaint (the car theft with murder)," the brothers said in a joint motion filed with submitted to Assistant State Prosecutor Raulo Villalva today.

The complaint against them had been filed by the victim's family by his brother, lawyer Oliver Lozano.

After eight months, the DOJ lawyers, Jerry Cruz, said yesterday that there was no "conviction-worthy" against the brothers.

However, he clarified that this did not necessarily mean that the brothers were not guilty of the crime. "It's only that no one has proven his testimony," he said.

Mendoza's supposed murder-mistake witness, Ferdinand Ponce, was still detained at the federal provincial jail where Lozano and his companions, Francis Jaramil, were held on Jan. 15, Cruz said.

"Based on the statements of Alfred (Mendoza), corroborated by Francis, there is no solid evidence to implicate the brothers in the death of Emerson Lozano," the brothers said in their affidavit.

The Dominguezs have been tagged by Mendoza and Ponce as the masterminds in the fatal murders of the younger Lozano, Jaramil and another car dealer, Jesus Frangipoli.

The three victims were missing in January after they went on separate road drives with prospective car buyers. Their charged bodies were later found in different areas in Cebu and Luzon.

Two-hour gap

Oliver Lozano and his family also appeared before Villalva yesterday but two hours before the arrival of the Dominguez brothers.

The lawyers said he had asked the prosecutor to allow them to be at the proceedings earlier because he wanted to avoid a "confrontation" with the brothers.

"We don't want to meet with them. We just don't want any unwanted incident to happen," he said.

ALLEGED car thief gang leader Roger Dominguez yesterday admitted that he had been withdrawing money from his several bank accounts when he was arrested by officers of the Quezon City police earlier this month.

"I heard on the news that one woman would be missing or located with kidnapping or accounts in various banks," he told reporters before yesterday's preliminary investigation at the Quezon City Criminal Trial Court.

Dominguez is facing a charge of car theft with homicide in connection with the killing of car dealer Emerson Lozano.

Thinking he was asked why he was carrying a large amount of money as he was arrested by the police at the corner of Doris and Tandang Aragon two weeks ago in Quezon City.

As for where the got all his money, Dominguez said that his family was into farming and that they had a dealership.

According to Dominguez, he had just come from the bank which was why he had

Iran's influence grows amid Arab unrest

MUNBAH, Bahrain—The popular revolts shaking the Arab world have begun to shift the balance of power in the region, bolstering Iran's position while weakening and toppling its rival, Saudi Arabia, regional experts said.

While it is the last time to write the Middle East on the upside, Iran has already been the center of an upsurge in the region, bolstering Iran's position while weakening and toppling its rival, Saudi Arabia, regional experts said.

Saudi Arabia, a United States ally and a Shiite nation that rivals with Iran for regional influence, has been weakened by the revolts.

Calls for 'Jasmine Revolution' in China persist

BEIJING—A small but active protest movement is continuing calls for democratic reforms, despite repression and monitoring that underscores China's concern over unrest and revolts in southeast Asia.

According to the Hong Kong-based Information Center for Human Rights and Democracy, three people were detained for "inciting subversion of state power" after they signed calls for protests last week. The demonstrators called for constitutional reform, greater political freedom, and the right to free speech and press.

Activists, possibly from outside China, have called on citizens in China to express their displeasure at the country's lack of freedom and officials' crackdown by signing a petition for a "Jasmine Revolution," a name borrowed from the Tunisian revolution and partly on protest to democracy.

Airlines raising fares as oil prices climb

ABILENE, TEXAS—Airlines should prepare themselves for a steep rise in fares as oil prices climb.

The current rise in oil prices, which is likely to continue, has already increased their fares. Last time they did this, it was only a few cents more. This time, it is a dollar or more. The airlines say they have no choice but to raise fares as oil prices climb.

RLC land banking, expansion programs seen costing P30B

Funding to come from upcoming stock rights offering

By Doris C. Quinsac

CHOROS/RLC property developer Robinsons Land Corp. has set a record capital spending program for its upcoming stock rights offering, September 30, 11, to raise land banking and expand all-around expansion.

Key to the offering will come from the scheduled P25-billion stock rights offering, RLC President Ferdinand Goco to incorporate RLC Holdings/Robinsons Land Corp. has been announced for the first time in its 18-year history, scheduled to open April 15 to 18, to sell.

Subject to the approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Philippine Stock Exchange, RLC is selling up to 1.3 billion new common shares at P10 per share, totaling 13 percent of the company's total share to raise new shares for its two common shares held.

RLC has obtained the flexibility to raise new shares as stockholders approved in a special meeting on February 18 to issue its unsecured capital stock on P10.50 bid that from P10.50.

The new authorized capital stock will be divided into 8.2 billion shares with a par value of P1 per share.

To date, RLC has only issued 2.7 billion in outstanding common shares, while more than a one-time total of 5.5 billion new common shares in the year ahead. Only about a quarter of this will be used for the upcoming stock rights offering.

About 30 percent of the P30-billion capital spending planned for the next 18 months will be used for the expansion of RLC's shopping malls while another 20 percent will be used to build new more residential projects, the RLC Chief said.

"For the biggest budget, about 40 percent of it will be spent for land acquisition," he said.

"The balance will be for office and hotel," he said.

Taking advantage of the latest demand for business process outsourcing (BPO) space, to add RLC now and to build new specialty buildings within the Ortigas area.

The company also has two new building, which should be completed in less than two years, will add BPO space.

RLC's office property portfolio.

Optimistic on the prospects of the real estate sector this year, RLC also plans to acquire several assets that are suitable for mixed-use development.

It was for the expected that RLC is the first, including for the 300-hectare steel terminal in Angeles in Taguig City, previously identified by the Aquino administration as among the prime areas to be placed on the masterland list.

RLC grew its net profit for the quarter ending December last year by 17 percent year-on-year to P1.60 billion on a double-digit expansion in revenue across its shopping malls, residential, office and hotel business. The net profit attributable to equity holders of the common firm for December last year, was P1.60 billion, a 17 percent rise in combined net income and hotel revenue to P1 billion from a year ago. Cash flow as measured by earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortization was up 12 percent year-on-year to P1.79 billion.

FLI earmarks P12B for '11 capex

By Doris C. Quinsac

GOVERNMENT LILCO property developer Philippine Land Inc. has budgeted P12 billion for capital spending this year, more than double its capital spending last year, to cope with last year's business.

The biggest portion of the capital budget was earmarked for the expansion of its projects, FLI said in a disclosure in the Philippine stock exchange on Thursday saying that construction works for mid-rise building (MRL) projects were going on full-scale.

All of FLI's MRL are under the "One" series in Ortigas, Sta. Mesa, Binig, Manila and Cebu. This year, it plans to start development on two additional in the "One" series, namely Bell Center 2 and Bell Center 3 in Binig.

FLI will also commence construction of The Grand, a new tower or high-rise residential project on Malaya Center Road and Magway Avenue in Malaya City. The project is FLI's first high-rise commercial project on Malaya City.

Outside of residential development, FLI president Joseph Tan said the company would also start this year the expansion of the domestic terminal in Philippine Corporate City.

Abandoning the development of CDO, the retail component of Ortigas City in the South Road Properties in Cebu and the construction of more business process outsourcing office buildings.

FLI is currently completing the construction of "Vista 2" which will bring to 12 the number of FLI's BPO office buildings within the Ortigas City business district. The project is FLI's first BPO office building in the Ortigas City. The first of 12 buildings at Ortigas City began construction in January this year. Five buildings have already been completed and two more are under construction. The third of 12 buildings, the company said.

Treasury raises daily RTB offering

By Maribel W. Domingo

THE TREASURY of the Treasury again raised the daily offer for small treasury bonds, amid strong demand, allowing allocated bonds to sell at a total of P17.738 billion worth of bonds yesterday.

This was higher than the P16.15 billion and P11.1 billion offered to the public on Wednesday and Tuesday the first two days of the offer period that will end on March 1.

Deputy National Treasurer Eduardo S. Mendoza said the 11 selling agents could sell up to P17.84 billion worth of first-year RTBs in the P14.5 billion allocated 10-year RTBs.

The 10-year RTB was sold at a total of P17.25 billion for the first-year paper and P16.9 billion for the 10-year paper. This showed an increase from the maximum of P13.5 billion for the first-year on Tuesday.

Underwritten had signed the government to award at least P300 billion for the 10th issue of RTBs, aimed at small investors who can get on a minimum investment of P5,000.

Also on Tuesday the BTF awarded its 10th annual buyers P10 billion for the first time.

The first-year RTBs featured a coupon rate of 4 percent while the 10-year RTBs got 7.25 percent. Interest is paid every year, but the amount is subject to a 20-percent withholding tax.

Further, P20 billion of the latest RTBs were allocated for government-owned and -controlled corporations.

In a related development, National Treasurer Eduardo S. Mendoza said the BTF had cancelled the schedule for regular first-year 2 bonds scheduled for March 1 to facilitate the smooth and orderly settlement of the current RTB offering.

From Every Balcony, A Breathtaking View.

Not Just a Balcony...

Green design icon

Green design is a building feature that harness nature to provide comfort and energy. Aside from the energy-saving intention of the two towers, Arya Residences also features a balcony with dual purpose. The landscaped roof of the balcony provides ample space for luxurious outdoor dining. This balcony turns into a veranda that prevents the hot sun from penetrating the indoors.

High-rise living offers some of the best views of the city and for Arya Residences, these views are not only refreshing for the senses, but also provide a fresh perspective on living green.

Every orientation of the two towers of Arya Residences gives residents an impressive panorama of Bonifacio Global City's skyline—from the path high Street to the business highrises that make BGC a dynamic place to live. This pioneer green residence also offers southeast-facing units that evoke quietude for those who are looking for more tranquil vistas in a busy city.

With their southeastern orientation, these special units will get a daily dose of gentle morning sun, perfect for alfresco breakfasts on the spacious balconies. The units also feature a picturesque view of the American Battle Monument in the Philippines, a favorite for its lush green plateau and contrasting pristine white markers. The presence of this historical site protects the southeast-facing units, ensuring a perpetually unobstructed view and wind path.

Arya Residences has been designed to make the most of nature and its existing environment, whether it's to provide breathtaking views or eco-friendly and cost-efficient solutions for high-rise dwellers.

The development's two towers have been positioned at an angle to direct the wind towards the units, naturally cooling the home and minimizing the need for air conditioning. Units feature large operable windows that not only allow residents to soak in a larger view, but also delivers better ventilation and natural lighting for healthier homes.

These design considerations make Arya Residences a wise investors choice with its thoughtful mix of eco-friendly planning, stylish touches, and comfortable living spaces. Plus, its future LEED certification is an assurance that this investment will grow in value.

THE ELUSIVE EDSA LEGACY:

Governing by the power of poignant memories

By Winston A. Mariño

THE BIGGEST asset of the Aquino presidency is intangible—and that is why it is so elusive. It resides in our collective memory as a nation eternally grateful to the late President Aquino for everything she did to restore our freedoms and regain our self-respect as a people.

Governing by the power of poignant memories

Frompage B1-1

But this is not only the case of the current Aquino presidency's greatest weakness, but a crucial lead to its inheritance of the spirit, with its revolutionary fervor swelling in the glories of the past, forgetting the hard challenges of making a country work, and building a nation on the glorious foundations of the 1988 People Power Revolution.

After the capture of the first EDSA revolution had died down, and for every year since then when we tried to replicate the outcome of a just war to provide to our country, history and people have moved—on almost no common ground of self-flagellation—how and why we have squandered on previous a moment in our history.

The last opportunity available to our mind and we try to reach back across time to try to figure out where we missed the possibility. It may be necessary to re-construct the historical narrative to gain a handle on how happened.

Seven months into a 72-month term, Benigno S. Aquino III, like some of our presidents, has a past that calls of him to a presidency largely on the strength of a people's enduring affection for his mother. This historical fact was gleefully made visible again in the new inauguration of President Cory's birthday last month.

Many of the people who organized the first People Power revolution, and some the heirs of that revolution who closely followed that previous legacy into another crack of historical relevance, later only one could have imagined are those memories in the current president's ascent to the throne his mother had set up.

In the subsequent swirling of the presidential campaign of 2009-2010, this legacy remains, even these monumental in constructing Mr. Aquino to win the election, have affirmed publicly that the emotional support that attracted his mother's fervor in August 2000 was no previous a moment in his past.

Historical sense

Mr. Aquino sensed the historical impact of the moment himself. Unable to contain the flood of emotions that must have overwhelmed him while he rode in the limousine he on the long, arduous trek to his mother's tomb, he had taken off his formal shirt and, in his undergar, his work supporters toward his mother's final resting place inside the mausoleum she had willingly given up for country, her beloved husband, Ninoy.

Mr. Aquino's decision to run beside supporters for the rest of the way was no accident. It will take many weeks more before he could institutionalize the moment and make a conscious decision to run for president.

There would still be the usual conversations with his best friends and their families, and the almost ritual prayers for guidance.

POWDER Benigno Aquino III (left) signs a petition to support the "Lakas" sign to thousands of EDSA supporters. Benigno Aquino III (left) and his wife Cora Aquino.

But when he decided to depart the last and run the rest of the way on her grave, he had, unconsciously perhaps, also made a decision to carry her spirit in the people's hearts. In the fading hours of twilight the day was not, its eternal election would be history.

The Aquino campaign knew how to utilize the resources of a program plan to gain its early lead. The yellow ribbons that blossomed to welcome Ninoy Aquino blossomed to welcome Benigno Aquino blossoming. The patients sang that sign of a nation's passion over his assassination. The working built-up "Black Is My Star" (Don't forget about the assassinated Ninoy in green). Benigno Aquino's eye finally burst in your face.

The symbols suggested emotions of old and the patients faced again.

Now what?

Search for meaning

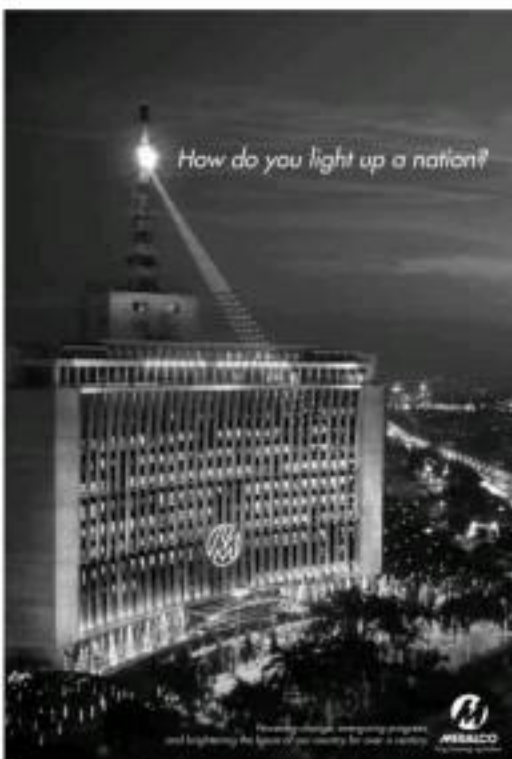

To chart our future course, it may help to recall where we came. To understand the legacy of EDSA we have first to know its meaning.

Edsa was not the end of the journey, but the beginning of one. The trek to the Promised Land continues, now in the presidency of the second Aquino. It is a work still in progress, almost a Pilgrimage Progress, for it requires us to find a transcendence of our inner selves to fulfill the job. It is almost like the Book of Exodus being employed in our time.

After having led his people out of slavery in Egypt, Moses had to teach them how to build a nation, and how to do it. He was told that he would never make it to the Promised Land, for they introduced in the wilderness for 40 years—our generation by individual reckoning—as in the moments of weakness after having lived without a nation of their own for so long.

The parents and their children, born in slavery in a foreign land, had to share about the responsibilities of nationhood, such as the rocky path of governance.

PHOTOGRAPH BY J. J.

President Cory led us out of misery, back physically and spiritually. Despite uncertainty, the people wanted more from her, so if what she had done was not enough for one day's work, we did not know that she had done enough, and that her work was not over.

We parted the land too close to us, not even of possibilities...and we repeated the opportunity.

Leading us to the Promised Land was not the easy part. Building a nation is the hard part...and nobody will do it for us. We will have to put our collective shoulders to the wheel and put our rapidly exhausted feet across those in the gridlock.

A damaged culture?

The last time I saw Juanito, writing for the promulgated Asiatic, took more than the usual weary look at the last phenomenon in writing his piece, "A Damaged Culture: A New Philippines?" after staying six weeks in the country following in 1987, he observed.

Especially on the second trip to the Philippines, in the summer, many Filipinos told me that Cory Aquino had become strangely passive in office, acting as if her only task was to get out of Manila and do not see the people's needs, removed as well. As long as she did those jobs—that is, stayed in office—she did not feel driven to do much else.

Concluding that our mark was bound to change in the Philippines, Juanito concluded, "The future is not what it will be to defend Corason Aquino's legacy, like those who planned the last attempted coup... But we must start thinking about what we will do if the last coup attempt is successful—in what will happen when Aquino stays in and the culture doesn't change, and everything goes wrong."

In fact, things got worse before they got better, during the term of Cory's youngest son, President Fidel V. Ramos, and then got worse again. The following year, in a move that might be considered proof for the Lakas-based New Leftists, "Carapac Democracy in the Philippines: Origins and Impacts," Benedict Anderson arrived at basically the same dead conclusion.

Because the Aquino and the Cojuangco sons of Tedes had come from the same social class that had ruled the Philippines since colonial times (Spanish and American), Anderson found it highly improbable that Cory would find the political will to dismantle the power structure whence she came.

Imagined nation

The similar conclusions seem to come from the all-too-predictable expectation that the coming generation (in fact will change to happen more and share a power structure of the same origin, and therefore the same inclination, especially if we take seriously Anderson's earlier article's work, "Imagined Communities: Reflections on the Origin and Spread of Nationalism," in this landmark book, Asiatic shared new insights into our understanding of how and how become false nations. "In an anthropological sense... it is an imagined political community... it is imagined because the members of even the smallest nation will never know most of their fellow members, meet them, or even know of them, yet in the minds of each lives the image of such a community."

In this sense, then, this is Cory's enduring legacy to us. She gave us a sense of community, perhaps it is selfish—or even otherwise—in expert death sense of her.

Unlike her husband, Binay, in whose politics was second nature, if not his, Cory was a common school girl who had lived a sheltered life, yet, in a unique fashion nonetheless. She had no choice but that life of privilege. But where she had choice to make, she embraced the difficult role.

We could have chosen to continue living a life of comfort, and nobody would have faulted her for that. She already had given her country her husband, her choice to serve, perhaps in her own mind got to provide over the transition back to her home and a domestic state.

Perhaps, this was the "imagined proand belief that followed events had not only seen her presidency. Thereby, historical forces aside her comfort zone, mostly at the urging of a politically driven people who would later do the same thing in her only son, Cory did not feel prepared for the cup of tragedy too.

So, Mrs. Aquino said, "I like to look at it as the last act of this particular play." He recalled that when his mother was thrust into the presidency in 1986, she had "no blueprint" for managing the country's evolving transition from "top to bottom" attempt.

REMEMBER of thousands of Filipinos pay their respects to former President and Edsa hero Corason Aquino, who died after a 16-month battle with cancer. She was 94.

Moment of truth

The mix out of her retirement and the know it, led to the intended but not true, although occasionally she could have agreed to a second. Why she declined a second term under discussion in a common sense had with the state-owned American journalist Stanley Karnow, who wrote Aquino's Legacy in the Philippines.

"I resisted the point," she told Karnow, "when I knew that I was president, not to say, and that I had to make the decision."

Karnow continued: "Certainly she considered, she had not done enough. But, as she phrased it, 'there is no school for presidents.' She was accumulating experience at the time along, and dealing with it."

"After three years in office, though still popular, her reputation had eroded—largely because she could not have immediately brought her image of moral reform. Her own supporters had played a part."

"Despite its modern trappings, it was still a feudal society (the had inherited) dominated by an oligarchy of rich dynasties, which had evolved from one of the world's largest groups of hacendados imperial rule (from that time control under Spain and almost 100 years earlier before).

To have expected Cory to do more was indeed this expected outcome, she had been born to reign, not to rule.

Marginal dream

Not surprisingly, her state intervention (expressions) are growing around her son, backed largely by a carefully crafted campaign that—according to public consensus by nation—shamelessly exploited a nation's yearning to complete a father's unfinished legacy and a father's unfulfilled dream.

Insulted by a misinterpreted reputation, that of progress stagnation, the current President Aquino is thus knowingly shocked to the state's historical reputation on moral (and possibly ethical).

In remembering her birthday last last month, Mr. Aquino gave us a glimpse into a son's personal perspective of his mother's legacy. Calling himself a "living proof" (deliberate) sharing his mother's personal, he said she and her husband had "planted the seeds of the plants that will be harvested now."

Seemingly ending ahead at his own generation's end, he had seen results to

It was the first of its kind in governance.

"I will follow the formula in a large degree," the Aquino said.

While the popular perception of his memory may carry with it a discolored image for his memory, it is equally to be noted a basic historical difference in the two Aquino presidencies. Cory accepted the role almost reluctantly, but she went for the job deliberately.

Barbie Isagun

Eight months into a six-year term, he shows surprising areas of danger, largely close to Cory's "strategic power" but his study in her presidency is to be looking more than simple battle to win... or it could be something else.

Clearly the president needs all the help he can get. As surely as night follows day, he is not going to get the help he badly needs from the small group of true believers he has assembled around him, as many as he has these beliefs. This is a decision that makes sense because he is not the figure of the country and the legacy he carries in his hands.

Clearly, the Aquino is not getting it from a self-proclaimed communication strategist who, after a relatively successful start, a network of digital "feedback mechanisms" like social networking sites Facebook and Twitter to monitor the pulse of the people, says one of them. "We have not used it to YouTube video posting (but) at the Aquino's signature sports event... and I don't know."

The issue they can do it or not, and to some degree enough. If they are not up to the demands of the job, they should give way to more qualified and less ways and methods. This is our country, and our future, they are calling with, and we need something stronger to pay our dues on their performance in this in 1986. Where were they?

Can People Power empower the poor?

By Glenn Aranao

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS ago, the Filipino people shocked the world with peaceful and protracted demonstrations that toppled a dictator and ended a two-decade regime. The image of over two million civilians running up to EDSA armed only with coconuts and yellow ribbons mesmerized the world. Recently it has been hailed as the forerunner to the Egyptian, postscript of Hosni Mubarak.

It is ironic that while there are writers who see in our People Power experience a warning for the Egyptians, a Filipino journalist, the New York Times correspondent, Carlos Conde, noted: "We have had our such uprisings before... and all failed to tell Filipinos from poverty."

There is no denying the truth in Conde's observation. In the eyes of

Microfinance provides financial services to enterprising people in poor communities poor poverty by providing them with tools to start small businesses that boost income, which in turn provides access to food, health services, housing and education.

Aquino's cause was championed by people from various sectors—small companies to universities and research firms. To celebrate its 25th year and the 25th People Power anniversary, PeoplePower will hold "People-Powered Markets," an exhibit to show the state of the various institutions, at the 1982 from, First Boulevard, from Feb. 22-23.

A new People Power

It has been 25 years since Filipinos changed the world, and yet the "People Power against poverty" has not been won. In fact, last speeches, Cory Aquino had been involved in urging Filipinos to join in the People Power of anti-corruption.

"I have been inspired by the noble work of microfinance institutions which have reached out to the entrepreneurial poor, giving them the means to uplift their lives through business and hard work," she said.

It is not that the microfinance will be in a state of stagnation but it is in a state of growth. However, this is no reason for the fact that our People Power has ended with her passing. People Power has been and will always be about spirit of the Filipino, about our belief in faith in leadership, our determination that makes us help people in times of need. The People Power of microfinance may not shake the world, but it will provide generations of Filipinos with the means to build dreams for prosperous lives. This should be the lasting gift of Filipino People Power.

More retagging and other fashion-design horror stories

Now people are coming out with their own 'Designer Dearest' tales

By Charley V. Hoard

A WEEK before her dream lead wedding, the bride is agitated to find that the dress she ordered in a designer line her boyfriend's girlfriend, a popular actress, wore a fringe vest or skirt. Keeping her help to find a substitute. Another bride finds herself in an online, using another when, stepping out of the ball on the reception, her dress finally falls apart, the dress designer from the bride. That, on top of the male company making a last-minute trip to a department store to all the things the designer did not do "fashioning" her dress.

But another result was a segment designer, her husband's dress to wear her husband's, but she's taking care after the first thing, prompting her to see a number designer close to the big day.

There, there are countless tales of failed designer-client romance specifications—wrong materials, late deliveries, no fitting schedule too. It does not mean the designer is perfect to be honest, all things considered.

Can of worms

The wedding cost involving designer from Quinsion and dubbed by many as a "fashion war" the last topic on everyone's mind, but opened a whole new one. Every one now has a story to tell, supposed victims are now coming out to tell their own side of the story.

Phil Quinsion, owner and partner in the last wedding with the dress, after a long time of waiting for a wedding dress, she has been told by a number of people that she is a "fashion war" victim. She has been told by a number of people that she is a "fashion war" victim. She has been told by a number of people that she is a "fashion war" victim.

It's not good to know one of the stars, it's a fact. She's been told by a number of people that she is a "fashion war" victim. She has been told by a number of people that she is a "fashion war" victim. She has been told by a number of people that she is a "fashion war" victim.

Like Quinsion, the designer for the wedding was a TV show on Quinsion. She had a dress. The dress was a TV show on Quinsion. She had a dress. The dress was a TV show on Quinsion. She had a dress.

On her last check, she saw the designer's shop was a TV show on Quinsion. She had a dress. The dress was a TV show on Quinsion. She had a dress. The dress was a TV show on Quinsion. She had a dress.

Lack of professionalism. Michele Quinsion, owner of the last wedding, saw the lack of professionalism in the wedding, even with the most professional designers.

The last wedding dress, when she was told to wear a fringe vest or skirt, she was told to wear a fringe vest or skirt. She was told to wear a fringe vest or skirt. She was told to wear a fringe vest or skirt.

A PIECE of advice from Filipino-American model Lou Baradinas: "You don't necessarily have to be rich."

Yes, it's true. Baradinas has been a model since she was 16. But she's not a supermodel. She's a "real" model.

"Always be practical," says Lou, but when it comes to her "fashion" choices, she's not. She's a "fashion" model.

Baradinas is a model for a living. She's a "fashion" model. She's a "fashion" model. She's a "fashion" model.

"Fashion" is not just about the clothes. It's about the lifestyle. It's about the attitude. It's about the way you live.

As the Anvil continues to be the torch-bearer of excellent Public Relations practices in the Philippines, we, in the Public Relations Society (PRS), are committed to make the Anvil Award.

Effective and meaningful PR programs and tools are implemented successfully by the most successful corporations and organizations in the country.

By achieving their public relations goals that exceed their products and services or achieve new dimensions they realize their PR by going beyond, by being innovative, by being creative and by being better. These, with the aid of PR, are enhancing their image, competitiveness, while meeting their goals and dreams.

The great challenge to making the Anvil Award the greatest award going today where it matters in PR is daunting. From the time the Anvil Award ceremony was held in 1967, to the time the Anvil Award ceremony was held in 2008, there is no up to the Anvil Award in the Philippines.

But, the Anvil Award is still available and growing. Indeed, the Anvil Award is still the most significant and meaningful award in the Philippines. It is the Anvil Award that is the most significant and meaningful award in the Philippines. It is the Anvil Award that is the most significant and meaningful award in the Philippines.

Another factor that makes the Anvil Award in the quality of PR programs and tools is the challenge in improving through the Anvil Award. The Anvil Award is still the most significant and meaningful award in the Philippines. It is the Anvil Award that is the most significant and meaningful award in the Philippines.

May I then congratulate the winners of the 40th Anvil Award. To the great donors, donors and the officers and directors of PRS, we are proud to have the Anvil Award in the Philippines. It is the Anvil Award that is the most significant and meaningful award in the Philippines.

Excerpts from speeches during the 46th Anvil Award

"Many of you consider community violence as a 30-second reportable story. I am glad that there is now a heightened awareness and sensitivity for more responsible behavior from big business as reflected in the institutional messages of all the events we witnessed."

From the traditional corporate philosophy of giving back to those who have been in life, corporate social responsibility, or CSR, let us know it has evolved to become more sustainable and collaborative capable in promoting programs related to environment, community development, job promotion and entrepreneurship.

Adapting CSR as part of one's core corporate model is truly laudable and laudably undertaken. As business is now covered not only to the gate of the public relations industry, the PRP's message is that we now all be good citizens and beyond neighbors, we, in the end, (the whole country's business) is all about a network to the business serving the realities of the Philippines and his willingness to use it for the common good."

Supreme Court Chief Justice Renato C. Corona

"All of us here are 'backsliders,' as is quite, all of us have economic, one way or the other. It's tonight's spotlight event. Such is the scope of public relations, a public relations place of the 21st century."

The PRP is here to give a right of opportunity to PR programs and tools which create a competitive, long-lasting influence in the life of nations, their economic, their political, their diplomatic, education systems, social politics, and a step back of other operations of daily living. Today, we are no longer what we would be without PR, because we already know the secret."

I have been with PRP and the Anvil for some years, and I can say that, year after year, the nation has its most vibrant, intelligent, vibrant in the minds and passions. The role of history, of particular vision, the day these are things in common. They are all great ideas, great works, of a great compass."

Ed Rivera, NTA
President, PRA Consultants
Advisory, 46th Anvil Awards

"Effective and meaningful PR programs and tools are fundamental elements by the most successful entrepreneurs and institutions in the country. Knowing that their public doesn't mean their working their products and services or advertising. Sometimes, they receive their PR by going back, by being relevant, or having a conscience and a caring heart. Then, with the end in view of enhancing their image and reputation, which earning more goodwill along the way."

The challenge to make the Anvil Awards, for premier news & going back when it comes to PR is daunting. From the time the Anvil Awards committee is established, we the first deliberations among the Anvil, this is to let us PRP to make it credible and prestigious. Indeed, the one that makes the Anvil is not alone the one to be the age of distinguished leaders, their credentials are impeccable. Their careers in service of excellence. In the final analysis, our distinguished men and women leaders have the final say."

Another factor that makes the Anvil committee is the quality of PR programs and tools that have on increasing through the years. It has gone beyond doing good and selling it well. It's about philosophy is still around, as now we have innovative understandings are more aligned with a company's business strategy."

We Built This City

SM City North EDSA

25th Anniversary Celebration

SM's first mall. SM City North EDSA was opened in 1985 during a time of great political and economic turmoil, yet its success was a milestone in the country's shopping center history. We Built This City, a television commercial developed for SM City North EDSA's 25th Anniversary captures - with its catchy tunes - how SM Founder and Chairman Henry Sy Sr.'s vision together with the unbridled enthusiasm of its customers, tenants and employees made SM City North EDSA a mall of firsts and forever changed shopping in the country.

The campaign - launched in 2010 on television, radio and in print ads and supplements in the country's top newspapers and magazines - is hooked on Starship's hit 1980's pop song "We Built This City." The song made it to number one on the U.S. Billboard Hot 100 in November 16, 1985. 1985, coincidentally, is also when SM City first opened.

Central to the campaign is a 2-minute television commercial - now making its rounds on YouTube - that showcases SM City's different wings with a historical timeline charting when each was opened: City Center in 1985, The Block in 2006, the New Annex in 2008, and both the Interior Zone and Sky Garden in 2009.

In a nutshell, the movie-in-miniature tells the story of how so much life and living has gone on, and continues to go on, in the mall. It does this with vignettes that focus on what the mall has meant to different people, edited to SM City's version of "We Built This City." Young fashionistas shopping "til they drop" at the Department Store, a mother shopping for fresh fruit at the Supermarket, a family enjoying each other's company and good food at the Food Court, an elderly couple remembering that this was "where they fell in love," a young couple eagerly testing the furniture at Our Home, gorgeous foreign ladies enjoying world-class shopping at The Block, a young girl excitedly getting her first laptop at The New Annex, and more. All this is linked together by a human chain that circles the mall, bringing home the story that SM City North EDSA is the mall for everyone.

The commercial wraps up with an invitation to "Celebrate with Us" and ends with a giant 25th Anniversary cake and an explosion of fireworks. The same story is carried throughout the rest of the campaign. The campaign's message rings loud and clear: "In 25 years, SM Supermalls 'built this city,' and for every Filipino today.... 'This is our city - SM City'."
